IN GREEN CATHEDRAL AISLES.

The birds are chanting songs of praise,
And music murmurs in the trees,
For in these quiet woodland ways
The choristers are birds and bees;
The flowers with incense fill the sir,
And nature's priests her vestments wear,
In forest, free from human guiles,
Are rear'd these grand cathedral aisles.

The disy teems with restless life,
And tapering steeples bear the cross—
A symbol of the Christian's strife
Through all the year of gain and loss.
So ever upward point the trees
And wave their plumes in every breeze,
To lure the wanderer miles and miles
Within the green cathedral aisles.
—C. S. Kingsland in New York Home Journal.

Campbell, burning pursuit, but was unable to prevent both the Estremina—a brig of four guns-and the convoy from running ashore. Then, setting fire to both vessels, Don Antonio and his gallant men ran away inland with great unanimity. But the Harrington was so close that Campbell, lowering his boats, soon boarded both ships, and his men extinguished the flames before any material damage was done, and in a few hours he had succeeded in floating both ves-sels again. After putting prize crews on board, the industrious Campbell went on shore to see if there was anything else "worth picking up," and discovered a quantity of copper bars—a very valuable commodity. These he secured without firing a shot, and then he and his merry men said goodby to the Spaniards, and with the two prizes in company set sail for Sydney, highly pleased at the result of their adventure. In due course the Harrington sailed into Port Jackson, but the level headed Scotch captain came in alone—the prize were not visible. The following day he was requested by Governor King to produce his log, and appeared greatly shocked when the irate governor told him that he had committed a breach of neutrality. War with Spain was not declared until Dec. 13, 1804, and it was not till January, 1805, that the British government granted a letter of marque to any ship, and yet here was this daring merchant skipper committing an act of war on his own account in October! Now, singular to relate, Campbell had only been doing on a very minor scale the same thing as had been done by the orders of the British cabinet on a very large scale in the same fashion in another part of the world, though, of course, neither he nor the angry gov-ernor knew it. The incident is a notable one in naval story: Admiral Cornwallis (the government having at last awakened to the veiled hostility of Spain, and the energetic Pitt having succeeded the peaceful Addington) was directed to dispatch some frigates to intercept and detain until further orders the Spanish treasure squadron on its way from Montevideo to Cadiz. The Indefatigable, 44, the Lively, 88, Medusa, 40, and Amphion, 40 guns, were sent away as quickly as possible, and cruising near Cape St. Vincent, fell in with the Spanish fleet on Oct. 5 and ordered them to bring to. Nathau B. Scott, Senator elect from West Virginia, was born in Guernsey county, Obio, in 1842 While still a boy ie enlisted in the Union army during the Civil war. At the conclusion of that conflict he settled in Wheeling. He first received work as a laborer, but gradually rose and engaged actively in mercantile and industrial pursuits for himself. His chief pursuits have been the manufacture of glass and nails, and he is at present at the head of several large industrial concerns in Wheeling.

Mr. Scott's political career began in 1882, when he was elected a member of the State Senate. He was re-elected in 1886, defeating Hon. John O. Pendleton who was subsequently elected to Congress. While in the Senate he served on several important committees and was the framer of the mutual savings bank law of the State. For the past five years he has been West Virginia's member of the Republican National Committee, and during that time he has been a member of the executive committee.
